Council approves assessment district for building a public road on Hilltop Drive as well as bandstand for park concerts

by Lisa Parsons

The Lemon Grove City Council, at their Monday meeting, unanimously approved a recommendation to create an assessment district to build a public road on Hilltop Drive and agreed to contribute $50,000 to the project from city street and road funds.

City Manager Jack Shelver said a public street on the the hill would be beneficial to the people of Lemon Grove because the city could control parking and it would alleviate some of the problems the city has been having with trash pickup and water trucks serving the apartments already on the hill.

The creation of an assessment district was originally proposed four years ago, but problems with utility relocation and acquisition of easements and right-of-way slowed the project. In the intervening years, the estimate of the cost for the road has increased, said Shelver. "The cost of that street is estimated to be $287,000. The old estimate was $235,000. That has to be spread by assessment over 11 properties. The owners of the properties in that area were willing to sign a petition to a build a street and to be assessed for it , earlier," he said.

The road project will be put out to bid and property owners who live on the street will receive a bill twice a year from the city to make the bond payments. "They will pay if off over 10 or 15 years," said Shelver. "It will range from a $15,000 to $40,000 assessment, which will run them $5,000 to $6,000 a year."

The council also voted to develop plans for a bandstand or bandshell for Berry Street Park for the Summer Concerts in the Park. The structure will serve as a focal point for the band for Concerts in the Park and at other times will serve as a shelter for picnics and other similar activities. The total cost of the shelter, plus the extension of electricity from the public restrooms, is estimated to be $20,000.

In other business, Lemon Grove Firefighter Carl Mullins received an award for 10 years of service to the City of Lemon Grove. The Mt. Miguel graduate served in the reserve before actually becoming a firefighter and was commended by Mayor Dorman for his faithful service.

Mt. Miguel High School recognized for outstanding scholastic achievement

Twenty-six high schools including Mt. Miguel, in San Diego County will add a combined total of 56 Outstanding Achievement Awards to their walls and trophy cases, County Superintendent of Schools Thomas C. Boysen announced recently.

Outstanding Achievement Awards are being given by the California Department of Education to recognize those schools in the top 5% of their comparison group on statewide quality indicators. Schools are compared with other schools that have similar socioeconomic characteristics.

This is the fourth year Outstanding Achievement Awards have been given to California high schools. Statewide, 916 awards will be extended.

Schools in San Diego County earned awards in 21 different categories. Twelve categories recognize schools with a large percentage of students enrolled in challenging college prep courses. Nine categories are based on performance on California Assessment Program (CAP) and Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) exams and success in achieving a low dropout rate.

"The Outstanding Achievement Awards offer additional evidence that schools in San Diego County are doing an excellent job," said Boysen, "Some of these schools have been doing a splendid job for many years. Others have made big gains recently, They all deserve to be commended."

Boysen noted that an outstanding educational program is a team effort. Teachers, students, parents, classified staff, board members, and school administrators should all share the credit.

WW I veteran Robert Dalley turns 100

by Lisa Parsons

A Lemon Grove man who has seen the world's technology change from covered wagons to space shuttles celebrated his 100th birthday March 4.

Robert Dalley, 100, was honored March 3 at the Lemon Grove stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints.

The festivities kicked off with Dalley, a World War I veteran, being presented a flag by the Spring Valley VFW Color Guard. Then, Dalley and his wife, Reva (the couple celebrated their 70th anniversary in October), cut the birthday cake. When Dalley was a little reluctant to smile for the cameras as he cut the cake, Reva gave him a birthday tickle that put a smile on his face.

As the couple enjoyed their cake, portions of Dalley's diary were read. It started, "I was born of pioneer stock on March 4, 1890." In the summer of 1903 Dalley and his family left their home in Santa Clara, Utah in a prairie schooner to establish a homestead near Jackson Hole, Wyoming. Dalley's diary told of the difficulties of schooner travel and camping on the open prairie. At one point in the trip, the Dalley family ran out of milk and Robert Dalley and his brother were forced to drink mare's milk. His comment was, " We relished it and thrived on it." One begins to wonder if mare's milk may be the secret to the Dalley family's longevity--his brother lived to be 94.

Dalley's early years in Wyoming were spent in a log cabin at the base of the Grand Tetons. He rode a horse to his one room school house and ended his education before the completion of his third year of high school.

He worked for a short time on the Jackson Hole newspaper and then went on a mission for the church in Missouri. In 1918 he was drafted and eventually ended up in San Diego for training at Camp Kearny. From there, he was shipped to Europe where he fought and was wounded in the Battle of the Argonne Forest. Dalley, an Army machine gunner, was struck by a German bullet that pierced his helmet and creased the top of his skull. He spent the rest of the war recovering from the wound that earned him a Purple Heart. He didn't receive his Purple Heart until 66 years later, however.

To commemorate this time in Dalley's life, a member of the church sang a medley of hits from WW I, including an impersonation of Louis Armstrong singing "Hello Dalley." Dalley married shortly after his return from WW I and another group of friends sang love songs to the couple.

Dalley then embarked on a career as a forest ranger in Wyoming and for more than 30 years he was the guardian of the wildlife in the Grand Tetons.

In 1952 he moved to Lemon Grove where he has been active in his church and VFW Foothills Barracks 1774.

Dalley received several honors Saturday including a letter from President and Barbara Bush, a proclamation from San Diego Mayor Maureen O'Connor, a proclamation from Lemon Grove Mayor Jim Dorman and a new Lemon Grove postcard presented by Mayor Pro Tem Lois Heiserman and a plaque from the U. S. Forest Service.

New Miss Lemon Grove to be selected Saturday night

Eleven lovely young ladies will compete for the title of Miss Lemon Grove Saturday night .

Cathy Gardiner, Tami McIntyre, Christine Miller, Carolyn Miller, Amara Early, Tami Woodard, Julie Grate, Margaret Faulkner, Keri Howard, Wendy Bailey and Kristi Yarrbourgh will take the stage at 7 p.m. at Lemon Grove Middle School.

The audience will see a sportswear preview, the evening gown competition and an on-the-spot interview of the contestants. In-depth interviews will be conducted earlier in the day as well as judging of the essay contest. The topic the young women addressed in their essays was "With only 10 years left in the decade, what will the role of women be in the next ten years."

Mark O'Rourke will emcee this year's pageant with the theme, "When You Wish Upon a Star."

Kohler selected as Student Ambassador

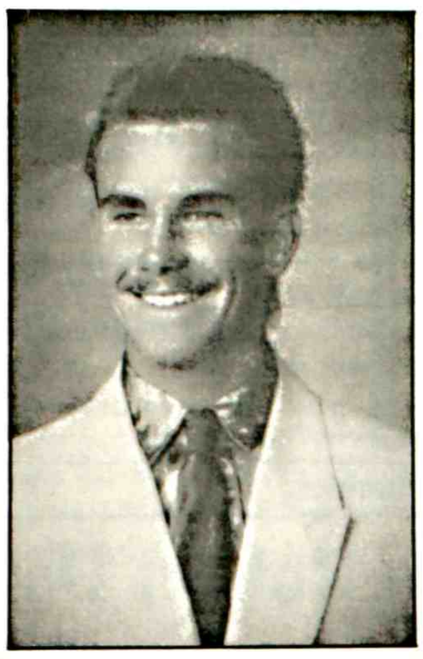

Mt. Miguel student, Michael Kohler, was recently selected to be an ambassador for The People to People High School Student Ambassador Program.

As a High School Student Ambassador, Kohler will travel to Spain, France, Czechoslovakia, Austria and Switzerland with 30 other students from all over San Diego. They will spend six days in each country, staying two days with a homestay family and four days in hotels.

Kohler was initially selected for the program because he finished third in his class. "I know some other people who received letters also, but I was the only one who followed up on it because it was something I had always wanted to do," he said. He was required to complete a screening questionnaire, provide three letters of recommendation and finally, go through a personal interview.

"They asked questions like, 'How do you feel about being away from home?' and 'What does is mean to be an American?' Those were easy, it was the technical questions like, 'What are the two main Czechoslovakian cities' that were difficult," said Kohler.

To ease the burden of these technical questions in the future, Kohler will go through an orientation program and participate in an intensive briefing in Washington, D.C. The goal behind the program is "world peace through world contact," an idea that originated with the program's founder, Dwight D. Eisenhower. Students are encouraged to make friends and share with their host families what life in the United States is really like, while remaining open to the culture and customs of the countries they are visiting.

Michael Kohler

But before Kohler gets on the plane, he has a big job in front of him--earning the over $4,000 necessary to participate in the program. He currently works part time at 7-11 and plans to get another job, but he is afraid that won't be enough. "My parents have some money put aside for me, but that's for college," said Kohler. "I'm going to need some help."

He is planning to attend University of California at Santa Barbara in the fall and eventually become a doctor.

Those wishing to help sponsor Kohler can contact him at 475-9118.

Hale continues family tradition in new location

by Lisa Parsons

A 34 year tradition in hair styling is still going strong, but with a new look in a new location.

Many long time Lemon Grovers will remember their wives, mothers or sweethearts making a weekly trip to the Vada-Lois Beauty Salon for a cut and curl. The shop's two owners, Lois Thornhill and Vada Dawson, would share a cup of coffee and some gossip while Lois' daughter, Ann, turned the beauty shop into her after school rec-room. Ann decided at an early age that she wanted to follow in her mother's footsteps and in 1967 she earned her license.

She joined her mother at Vada-Lois in the early seventies and when the two founders decided to retire, Ann Hale bought their shop. For the next 13 years she saw hair styles change and people come and go, but she always retained a large number of loyal clients.

Then as a new decade approached, Hale looked around the Vada-Lois shop and decided she would like to make a change, "It was either re-do the whole place or move," said Hale, and she opted for the move. "I wanted a place that was more accessible, a new building, better parking and, most of all, more traffic coming through."

She closed down Vada-Lois and bought a shop about four blocks further east at 8089 Broadway called Permanent Solutions. At this time, she also decided to retire the "Vada-Lois" name and keep the name "Permanent Solutions."

"It was time for something new and more modern," said Hale.

Modern sums up the new decor of Permanent Solutions. The styling stations are art-deco, black lacquer cabinets, covered with mirrors and the walls are painted a pale mauve. The chairs and sinks are also black with silk plants and flowers adding touches of color. "The old shop was homey," said Hale. "This shop is much bigger and has more light. The Vada-Lois shop was so hidden and the view was terrible," because it was behind a convenience store.

When Hale decided to move a lot of support came from her friend and co-worker Darlene Kelly. "We worked together for nine years and she's always been very loyal and helpful. I'm really happy we're here."

Kelly and Hale have plans to take more beauty and hairstyling courses to bring them up to date and learn the latest techniques. "We want to try to modernize everything," she said emphatically. She said she hopes the new shop's look will attract a young crowd and please her loyal customers.

The clients who have moved with her to the new shop will recognize three familiar faces and meet three new ones. Hale would like to add another stylist and manicurist to her staff as well.

The new stylist may well be her daughter. "My daughter seems to have a flair for hair," said Hale. "I'd prefer her to go to college, but it's made me happy all these years," she said with a shrug. "It would be nice to start a new tradition of 34 years in the same place."

From Where I Sit

Beer House of the August Moon

The statute of limitations concerning the incident at the "Beer House of the August Moon" has run out so now it can be told.

During the years that my wife, Willie, and I were in the paperhanging business we experienced some peculiar situations. We had built a reputation working for the finest interior decorators in the area, creating their "nightmarish" dreams using wallcovering.

We would give each customer or job a silly name as to how we felt about the project. There were many "Crabby Appletons" (you know rotten to the core). One of those most unusual paperhanging jobs was at a well-known local beer distributor's offices and warehouse. The job had to be done at night during one of our area's hottest and driest Santa Ana weather conditions. Thus it was dubbed "Beer House of the August Moon".

That day I met with the decorator who explained to me that he wanted to redo the office to create a "Grecian Motif:" A heavy cloth vinyl marble-like background, featuring large columns and cornices from wallpaper murals.

I tried to explain, "It's impossible to hang paper over heavy vinyl. It just won't stick."

"You're the professional, hang it!" he responded.

My wife and I had hung all the marble-like vinyl on the walls of the office by early evening. It looked great until the walls dried out. Along each seam was a white cloudy effect from the adhesive. All our sponging with clean water was to no avail. The 7-11 store was still open so I went over and bought several soaps and detergents, but nothing would remove the haze.

It was now well after midnight and the messy seam situation wasn't getting any better. Alas! I remembered a trick my father taught me during my apprenticeship with him: "Wash the cloudy walls with very strong coffee and that will stain the wallcovering uniformly."

Just outside the office door was an automatic coffee machine. "Willie, make lots of extra strong coffee so we can use it to wash down the walls." To make it extra strong she ran it through the machine 2 or 3 times.

The strong coffee did the trick and the walls looked good. We finished by hanging the paper columns and cornices over the marble-like vinyl, packed up our gear and went home to bed about 3:00 a.m.

Our phone woke us up a little after 8:00 a.m. It was the interior decorator reporting that all the columns and cornices had fallen off the walls and was laying on the floor. Willie and I wearily crawled out of our warm bed and returned to the beer warehouse.

As we were entering the warehouse a man was leaving, carrying the coffee maker. "Boy! Somebody really liked lot's of strong coffee last night. They burned out the machine," grumbled the repairman.

"Neither my wife nor I drink coffee," was my truthful response. We quickly rehung the columns and cornices, this time double cutting them into the heavy vinyl.

The job came out beautiful to the complete satisfaction of the interior decorator, but instead of the usual Coor's beer smell, the office now reeked of the strong aroma of coffee. Thus we will always remember that unusual project as "The Beer House of the August Moon."

Euphoria over Nicaraquan election seen as premature

We Americans have a tendency toward seeking simple solutions to complex problems and, once achieved, to become euphoric if the resolution is in our favor. For us to view things simplistically is not surprising in view of the fact that television news reduces the most complex issues to 30-60 second "bites." One imagines that the literal "end of the world" would deserve only 90 seconds and be followed by a commercial.

A case in point is our apparent reaction to the election upset in Nicaragua. If what one hears and reads is correct "Democracy has arrived" in that beleaguered nation and all is now right with the world. Given what is known about the forces involved and the history of Latin America, this is an unbelievably naive conclusion. On the one hand, the military and police (overt and secret) remain firmly in the hands of Ortega and the Sandinistas. Even a cursory look at Latin American history gives ample evidence that military dictatorships are not quick to hand over their power to duly elected citizen governments.

On her side, Mrs. Chamorro, a political novice, is the candidate of an unwieldy coalition of opposition groups spanning the rainbow from Marxist to right wing radical. This group of "odd bedfellows" did manage to pound out a common platform of "ending compulsory conscription, decreeing amnesty, scaling down bureaucracy and developing free enterprise," but are already at odds as to how to even begin accomplishing this. Ortega, meanwhile, says that he will not help with transition until the Contras are disbanded, while the Contras assert that they will not disband until after transition to the new government. One might well assume that a good deal of chaos is yet to come.

All of this is not to say that the Chamorro victory was anything but astounding and encouraging. But oversimplification and false euphoria can only lead to disappointment, anger and over-reaction when the situation in Nicaragua begins to show its cracks. The United States and all of the western hemisphere have a considerable stake in a peaceful and productive Latin America. Simplistic and uninformed thinking and the resultant unfounded euphoria won't help.

Sports Commentary

Sweatin' out instead of workin' out

A check of the calendar tells us the Padres should be playing the Milwaukee Brewers in Chandler, Arizona this afternoon - but the sports pages tell us the owners still have players locked out of training camp over a labor dispute.

Even for owners, who as a group have never been mistaken for the scholarly type, the current action has to be the most stupid way in the world to get their points across.

It's hard to even remember what their current point is. The owners wasted months of negotiating time insisting on a salary cap, the elimination of arbitration and the installation of a pay by performance scale.

The Players Association told the owner's negotiators what they could do with such ideas and asked for a reduction from 3 to 2 years of service before a player can go to arbitration.

A former basic agreement stipulated the 2-year level, but the owners, pleading poverty, gained the year increase. During the 1985 negotiations the team rosters were also cut from 25 to 24 players. Poverty again.

Events proved the owners lied, of course, and had taken the added year of player's service under false pretenses.

The players want the year back, but the owners say the point was fairly bargained away by the players and is not a subject for reconsideration.

That, in a nut shell, is where the owners-players dispute now stands. Oh, there are a few other issues, but no major ones.

The players want the owners to put more money in the pension fund and a return to the 25 man roster limit, but the stumbling block between opening the camps and playing ball or sitting at home appears to be the restitution of that lost year of arbitration.

How arrogantly insane-on both sides.

The owners just signed a 4-year network television contract worth $15 million to each team. That money swells team coffers in addition to their revenue from ticket sales, parking, local radio and TV, concessions and souvenir sales.

Players' contracts have never been more richly endowed. Free agency, which has not been much of an issue in the current negotiations, has enriched pitchers Mark Langston and Mark Davis by $16 million and $13 million, respectively, over the next 5 years for Langston and 4 for Davis. And slugger Will Clark banks $4.25 million for just this season.

Somewhere in the absurdity and witlessness of the current negotiations some thoughts of reason and perception must be raised in the name of common sense.

One wonders which side gains by invoking a lockout? How far and to what level must the negotiations go before reason dictates that the camp gates open and the players begin the physical conditioning process of getting ready for a new season? Who wins if players are in poor shape when play begins?

Players and owners are supposed to be meeting this week. Let us hope wiser heads have prevailed in the council chambers and reason will replace greed on both sides of the negotiation table.

Until now it appears that both sides have been pursuing revenge for past deeds.

It's time to forget revenge and play ball.

Animal overpopulation -- a people problem

by Gina Binder

A shaking, underweight dog huddles, scared, in the corner of a run at Animal Care Center, a boarding facility for pets in San Diego. The dog is "Star," a black Labrador mix, and she has been abandoned by her owners. Eighteen pounds underweight, and still not eating, she is afraid of men and very hand shy. Star was lucky though. She didn't end up one of the estimated 14-18 million animals euthanised every year in shelters. Instead, she was adopted by Kristie Burson, an employee at ACC.

"Star was obviously beaten,"said Burson. "She had scabs on her back and her legs and if you raised your hand she would drop and urinate on the floor." Star's owners had planned to board Star for 14 days but never picked her up said Burson. "The owners would call and say they were coming but never arrive," said Burson. "They moved, left no forwarding address and just disappeared."

"Most dogs are old and the owners have had them for numerous years when they suddenly abandon them," said Dr. Terry Roberts of ACC. "We have at least one abandoned dog a year, and not enough people realize it is against the law to abandon a pet at an animal care facility of any kind."

The San Diego Humane Society offers adoption of abandoned pets and they boast a 99 percent adoption rate according to Loni Kian, an employee at the Humane Society.

"We don't put adoptable animals to sleep in X amount of days," said Kian.

"Adoptions average about 100 animals each week." But the Humane Society declined to say exactly what an adoptable pet was, when asked.

In San Diego County alone, about 30,000 animals are picked up off the streets in a year according to Hector Cazares, Assistant Director at the San Diego County Department of Animal Control. Nationally the figure increases to 25 million. The chances of these animals being adopted is slim, according to Cazares. A dog is kept a minimum of three working days before being euthanised. Licensed pets receive a minimum of seven days and the owners are called and written to.

But people fool themselves by thinking they're doing their pets a favor by dropping them off in a secluded area, said Cazares. "In reality, they're only adding to the seven to 11 million pets that die of starvation, disease, or are killed on the highways a year," he said. "As ironic as it may sound, the lucky ones are the ones that are euthanised."

Fortunately, society is beginning to be educated to the fact that they should have their pets spayed or neutered, said Cazares. Still 70,000 dogs and cats are born everyday.

Conservatively speaking, one female having four pups her first year and those pups having four pups and so forth, one female could produce 2,916 offspring by her seventh year, said Cazares. But the average litter is seven to eight pups and up to 12, not four.

"Excuses are always being made not to get the family pet fixed though," said Cazares. "People think their pet will be less active if it gets spayed or neutered, which is a myth. And for the people that say they want their children to see the miracle of birth, I would also like them to see the miracle of death, and the barrels of dead animals we discard every two weeks."

Joe Freed on the Movies

This week's movie: The Hunt for Red October

Lurking silently in the depths of the Atlantic Ocean is the Red October, a massive submarine with enough nuclear firepower to destroy most of the East Coast. But the sub is a threat not only because it's destructive capabilities are in the hands of the "evil empire," but simply because it is quiet...completely silent. The Red October could destroy a good portion of the United States and no one would ever know what happened.

Presiding over this ominous machine is Captain Marko Ramius (Sean Connery), the Soviet Union's most respected and gifted seaman. That is, until he murdered his second in command, disobeyed all orders from Moscow, and took his few hundred missiles on a one way trip to our coast.

Ramius isn't alone though, Captain Bart Mancuso (Scott Glen) and the crew of the Dallas are watching closely, hoping to understand Ramius' intentions. Does he plan to start World War III, or is he actually attempting to defect? The latter theory is supported by CIA analyst Jack Ryan (Alec Baldwin), whose only concern is finding Ramius before some trigger-happy American blows him out of the water.

"Die Hard" director John McTiernan's new suspense-thriller is a rare pleasure, entirely gripping from scene to scene. Tom Clancy's best-selling novel was masterfully adapted by screenwriters Larry Ferguson and Donald Stewart, and McTiernan crafted the tale into an "edge-of-your-seat" masterpiece.

The film is cast with a touch of genius; every actor looks like he was born in the CIA. Connery is excellent as Ramius, despite his Scottish brogue, and Baldwin is equally impressive as the cunning American adviser. Strong support comes from James Earl Jones, Sam Neil, Jeffrey Jones, and Tim Curry as a Soviet doctor. You know who Tim Curry is don't you? He's the one who always makes people say "My God, its Doctor Frankenfurter!" when they see him on screen. (If you don't understand that, don't worry. It's only because you haven't seen "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," and most normal people haven't.)

However, the most striking aspect of the film, aside from the amazingly realistic special effects, is the soundtrack. Composer Basil Poledouris adds so much to the effect of the film that I'd say his importance equals that of all the lead actors combined. The film also highlighted a number of Russian choral works, including the beautiful yet seldom heard Soviet national anthem, not to be confused with The Internationale, the international theme of communism.

This is also a true "people movie." I haven't seen so many people line up hours in advance in a long time. Perhaps it's because they know this may be their last chance to see a rousing cold war movie for a while. If Gorbachev continues to be such a nice guy we may never get to see Clancy's other hit, Red Storm Rising, make it to the screen.

A not so simple, Simon

by Robert Korbett

Few people need no introduction. Playwright Neil Simon, who has penned comedies such as The Odd Couple, The Sunshine Boys and Plaza Suite; musicals like Sweet Charity and They're Playing Our Song for the stage and The Heartbreak Kid and the Goodbye Girl and adaptations of his work for the screen, is such a luminary.

Jack O'Brien, artistic director of the Old Globe Theatre was pleased to present Simon to San Diego at a recent press interview and even prouder to be having the world premiere of Simon's latest work, Jake's Women, opening March 8th at the Balboa Park theatre.

Simon returned the complement about working with the Globe staff. "I have opened a few shows at the Ahmenson Theatre," says the Los Angeles based writer, "but that theatre seats 2,000 and the audience is expecting a completed work. I need a working period. I like the ambiance and appreciate the support of the Globe staff and the San Diego audiences."

Ideas come suddenly to the playwright. "But it takes lots of time for the germination of the project," he admits. "I write a little and see how far I can get. Then I go on to something else. But somehow, if the interest is there, my mind is working on the first project and when I return to it, the script works itself out."

But don't presume that a finished product is ready on day one of rehearsals. "It's a constant process," admits Simon. Rumors, Simon's 1988 Globe world premiere which has just completed a Broadway run, needed a lot of work because of its genre. "A farce needs a laugh every ten seconds," concedes Simon. Even now, he is rewriting the script of Rumors for presentation in England. He feels the language, locale, terms and timing of conversations need to fit more to the English ear.

Neil Simon

Is Jake's Women autobiographical? Simon admits that his writing is colored by his background. This story concerns a writer who finally confronts (whether in reality or imagination) the women in his life. "They are not real instances," the playwright confesses, "but thoughts. I don't know anymore what happened to me and what didn't. I change actuality to tell the story which is to be told."

Being a bankable writer doesn't guarantee a hit. Simon has taken his lumps. His name may make for advanced sales at the box office, but that money is good for a 10-12 week run. Yet Simon appreciates any assessment that he can learn from; it can corroborate what he thinks is lacking or strong in a show. He appreciates a critic who gives him precise remarks.

Sometimes dismissed for being prolific, Simon says he doesn't want to write for the masses. Television and the movies attract the unseen millions. But in the threatre, it is the comparatively small number of people in the seats he's aiming to please on a nightly basis.

Jake's Women premieres March 8th and runs Tuesday through Sunday evenings with weekend matinees until April 15th. For information and reservations call 239-2255.

"Much Ado About Something" satirizes Republican politics

It was a night for the Democrats to dish it out and the Republicans to "take it." The La Mesa-Foothills Democratic Club musical satire "Much Ado About Something" threw barbs at just about everything connected with the GOP in its two day-three performance run at the Scottish Rite Center. Book and lyrics were by Director Beverly Cassirer with musical direction by Al Jacobs. Set design was by Irving Lee.

Among the major performances were Eileen Wright, R. James Kresser, Saul Snyder, Sarah Crystal, Jim Morely, Sarit Caspi, Phil Smallen, Gloria Schiffman, Diane Rubin, Edith Hackel and Joseph Sieve.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF WILLIAM J. DOSTAL
Case Number: 151433
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate, or both, of: WILLIAM J. DOSTAL

A PETITION has been filed by THELMA V. PALERMO in the Superior Court of California, County of San Diego

THE PETITION requests that THELMA V. PALERMO be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on Apr. 2, 1990 at 1:45 p.m. in Dept. F-5, located at 1501-55 Sixth Avenue, San Diego, CA. 92101

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Eighty-two Mt. Miguel students are scheduled to participate in the 1000 Voice Choir which will sing at Point Loma Nazarene college at 7:30 tomorrow evening.

Mt. Miguel's High School Speech and Drama team attended the taping of the television show, Amen, in Los Angeles, on Wednesday. The Drama department has just completed a successful theatrical performance entitled Faces of the Theater and the speech Team took first place at Palomar college on February 24th.

Mt. Miguel has recently welcomed a new Counseling Secretary, Mrs. Susan Miranda, who was formerly the counseling clerk at Santana High School.

Mt. Miguel played host to visitors from Monte Vista's Associated Student body on February 22nd. Participating students from Monte Vista were: Christie Martinez, Linh Dar.ii, Jenny Galang, Amber Adams, Chad Richards, Matt Begley, Ryan Ehlen, Diana Arciga, Leslie Rick, Tany Guzman, Gina Wood, and Melanie Gonzalez.

Boys and Girls Track defeated El Cajon on March 1st with a 74 to 62 win for the boys and a 61 to 56 win for the girls. Corey White and Earl Bryers performed outstandingly in the meet. Although the Junior Varsity Track team lost to El Cajon, Lovie Tufaga won first place in both the 100 meter and 200 meter races. Next track meet will be held today at Mt. Miguel against Grossmont at 3:30 p.m.

The Matador ROTC rifle team continues its unbroken string of victories with its defeat of the San Diego State University ROTC rifle team Wednesday, February 28th. Lee Wolfe and Ernia Jacklin tied for high shooter honors with each scoring 250 of a possible 300 points. Blake Cheary shot a 245, Matt Morales a 239 and Rafeal Morfin a 228.

The Bilingual Education committee will host the 8th Annual Scholarship dinner on April 26th at 6 p.m. in the Mt. Miguel cafeteria. Tickets are $4.50 for adults and $2.25 for children under 12. All proceeds go toward scholarships. For further information contact Mrs. Julie Duenez at Mt. Miguel.

Counselors will be in the counseling office at Mt. Miguel one night each month to meet with students and parents to address any concerns. Special evenings set aside are March 29 for College preparation and decision making for incoming seniors and April 26 for Community college, R.O.P. and other education programs or options.

Two people representing the State Department of Education will be visiting Mt. Miguel's campus on March 15th and 16th to validate the report that members of Mt. Miguel's staff wrote in support of its being nominated as a Distinguished California High School. The fact that there are over 800 high schools in California, 64 were nominated and only five in San Diego County stresses the importance of this honor for Mt. Miguel High School.

Come rain or shine, waterhogs are waterhogs. Their sprinkler systems go on even when it's raining cats and dogs. They don't realize how important it is to use water wisely in the winter.

Don't be a winter waterhog.

Winter rain in San Diego doesn't wash away the fact that saving water is a year-round necessity. That's because local rain water contributes little to our daily supply. It's actually the melted snow that feeds the Colorado River and Northern California rivers that we rely on all year for 90% of our water.

There's no reason to go hog wild in winter.

Fact is, most lawns and shrubs are dormant in winter. So heavy watering, whether it's at homes, parks, schools or businesses, is more of a waste than ever. Water less frequently. Shorten the minutes your automatic sprinklers run. And, please, turn them off if rain is in the forecast.

Conservation. Our way of life.

There's a lot we can do to be water tight. To quench your thirst for more information, just give us a call at (619) 297-3218.

DON'T BE A WATERHOG

San Diego County Water Authority.

This winter, we're hoping to teach an old hog new tricks.
